A year-old baby was killed and four other people were injured, three seriously, in one of four accidents occurring in the district over the weekend.

The child, Sharon Kay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Linton, of Linton, Ind., was killed instantly in a head-on collision on Route 14, just south of North Benton at 3:20 a. m. today. She was dead on arrival at Salem City hospital.

Victor Linton, 29, the father, fractured jaw, severe lacerations of face and abrasions of body. His condition is described as fair today at the hospital.

Mrs. Kathleen Linton, 28, mother, fractured nose, possible fractured ribs and multiple abrasions; condition fair.

Richard W. Folsel, 21, of Youngstown, lacerations and abrasions of face and body. He was treated and discharged.

John B. Gillie, Jr., 21, of Youngstown, severe lacerations of the eyes, possible skull fracture and brain concussion.

Both cars were demolished by the collision, the state patrol said.

Three Other Mishaps

In the three other accidents no injuries were reported.

A car driven by Howard F. Spattholt, 45, of Youngstown, was demolished when it collided with a truck driven by Morris Johnson, 35, of Walkertown, Ind., on Route 224, east of Canfield, at 12:30 a. m. Saturday.

Spattholt was driving on the left side of the road at the time. He was arrested and fined $5 and costs by Mayor Hugh Dickson of Canfield.

Slight damage resulted to two cars in a collision on Route 224, a half mile west of Poland at 5 p. m. Saturday. William H. Farmer, 46, of Canton, drove onto the highway as another car driven by Virginia D. Posey, 20, of Youngstown, was passing.

Damage resulted to two cars driven by Samuel Choder, 43, of Pittsburgh and Alaniant N. Giancola, 45, of Struthers, involved in a collision at 9:35 a. m. Sunday in Unity on Route 14.

Giancola drove onto Route 14 and was hit by Ghoder's car, both being damaged. The former was arrested and fined $5 and costs by Mayor K. T. Gormley of Columbiana for failure to yield the right-of-way.

EAST, MIDWEST HIT BY RAINS

Flash Floods, High Wind Lash Areas Causing Heavy Damage

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, March 22—Floods and threats of floods harassed many towns and rural lowland dwellers in the Midwest and East today.

Drenching rains pouring into streams already swollen by melting snow and ice caused overflows in Iowa, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York.

An emergency crew recruited in Quincy, Ill., was sandbagging levees in an effort to prevent the Mississippi from overflowing 6,000 acres of rich wheatland.

While other communities still staggered from devastating tornadoes of last week, another twister hit the Tinker Air Force base at Oklahoma City, Saturday night, causing damage estimated at more than $15,000,000 to aircraft alone.

Gen. Frederick S. Borum, commanding general, listed 52 planes and several buildings destroyed, and other buildings and 50 planes damaged.

Pennsylvania Hit

At least five northwestern Pennsylvania communities were struck by flash floods following a three-inch rainfall yesterday. Mill creek overflowed into some sections of the Meadville business district and some families evacuated their homes in Titusville.

E. T. Stevenson, publisher of the Titusville Herald, said "it looks like our worst flood in years but no lives are threatened."

Parts of Warren, Bradford, and Union city also were flooded.

An ice jam in east creek sent five feet of water into a residential section of Rutland, Vt., causing an estimated $75,000 damage. Some lowland residents along the Susquehanna river near Binghamton, N. Y., were forced to evacuate their homes, and the Black river had overflowed at Lowville, N. Y. An ice jam 15 miles long was reported in the St. Regis river.

The Des Moines river had flooded some lowlanders from their homes at Ottumwa, Eddyville, and Tracy, Ia., with a predicted stage of seven feet above bankful still to come.

One of the heaviest 24-hour rainfalls in years flooded thousands of homes and businesses in Cleveland, and disrupted transportation. Dirt washing into tracks, forced virtually all streetcar lines to convert to bus service.

The Pacific northwest was lashed by a gale and fear was expressed that eight persons had lost their lives in a plane which disappeared during the storm.

The plane was last heard from over southwestern Washington and no trace of it had been found several hours after its fuel was believed exhausted.

The weather bureau said the rain in the upper Mississippi valley had ended and that skies generally were clear today over the eastern half of the nation. Temperatures ranged to well above normal, but cooler weather was in prospect for the Central Plains states.

Elsewhere, seasonal normals prevailed.

ENGLISH COURSES TO BE ANALYZED

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, March 22—A committee of professors from 13 Northern Ohio universities today began a probe of alleged "failure" of elementary and high schools to teach students proper English.

Dr. Robert L. Shurtler of Case Tech, president of the college English group of Northeastern Ohio, named a review committee and four sub-panels with this objective:

"To find means to improve the quality of English instruction in the primary and secondary schools of this state."

Dr. Shurtler said the action resulted from a resolution adopted by his group at Oberlin college last November, in a meeting attended by 81 professors of English from the 13 colleges. Business leaders and students' parents also joined the teachers in expressing concern over high school graduates' "deficiency" in English, he added.

The work of the committee on Ohio standards for English High school teachers will be simply to find out what the present standards are, now they compare with those in other states and recommend whatever changes are deemed necessary.

Professors named to the panels included: Charles Duffy of the University of Akron, Chester L. Shaver of Oberlin college, Dr. John S. Kenyon, professor Emeritus of Hiram college, Charles M. Coffin of Kenyon college, Robert A. Jelliffe of Oberlin, Florence Beall of Kent State, Ralph Engleton of Oberlin, Weldon W. Williams of Kent State, English Director Karl W. Dykema of Youngstown college and Donald J. Lloyd of Oerlin.

An immediate replacement at the Salem barracks has not been announced.

Return Corporal Tullis' Body From South Pacific

The body of Marine Corp. Warren E. Tullis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tullis of the Washingtonville road, is among the 3,257 fallen war heroes who are being returned from Saipan and Honolulu aboard the U. S. Army Transport Walter W. Schwenk this week.

Also being returned is the body of Marine Pfc. Raymond E. Sims, son of Wendell P. Sims of R. D. 1, Belton.

Corp. Tullis was killed in action on two June on March 21, 1945. He enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps May 20, 1942. He went overseas in September, 1944.

His body, along with 163 others, had been returned at instructions of his father, calling to Ohio. The Army said from 10 days to three weeks would elapse between the arrival of the Schwenk and final interment.

Tullis was born in Salem on Feb. 23, 1921. He was a graduate of Salem High school in 1939 and was employed at the National Standard Co. in Salem. He was a member of the Fourth Marine division, 2nd Division.

Surviving, in addition to his parents, are a sister, Helen, and a brother, John, who is now in the Army.

WILL ANNOUNCE JEWISH STATE

Anticipate News Today of Formation of New Government

(By Associated Press)

TEL AVIV, Palestine, March 22—A Jewish state to be defended by Jewish arms is expected to be proclaimed in Palestine today or tomorrow.

A reliable informant said a formal order proclaiming the existence of such a state will be made by Yand Leumi—the Jewish national council. No official announcement has yet been made by the council itself.

David Ben Gurion, chairman of the Jewish agency for Palestine, said Saturday a Jewish state already has come into being—prepared to defend itself.

Says Logical Move

(In New York City, Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the American section of the agency, said it was "logical" for Zionists to proclaim a state.)

Such a proclamation by the national council would repudiate in advance any United Nations trusteeship, defy Arab arms and be a step towards appeal for international recognition.

Tel Aviv—only all-Jewish city in the world—is the administrative center of the new state. Informants said it will be the capital at least through the provisional phase.

Government of the state would be in the hands of a provisional committee of 32 already appointed under authority of the Jewish agency by Vad Leumi.

The United States' reversal on partition caught the potential Jewish state still in the formative stage of evolving its own constitutional form.

Even now, under the necessity of getting a government setup without delay, it is too soon to say what form will be worked out.

Most Jews have been too involved in their fight with the Arabs to think much about it.

3 MOTORISTS FINED ON DRUNK CHARGES

Today's noon reading was 59, much higher than the 37 high and 25 low temperatures of one year ago.

It would have been ideal Easter weather.

LEADERS TALK OVER RESULTS ON TRIESTE

Italy Excited Over News Of Planned Switch; Red Strike Called

(By Associated Press)

ROME, March 22—Premier Alcide De Gasperi conferred for three hours today with French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and said afterward:

"We are going, I think, toward a United States of Europe."

Bidault announced Saturday the United States, Great Britain and France propose to give Trieste, now international territory, back to Italy. He met the Italian leader at tiny Crea, in the Piedmont region about 50 miles from Turin.

De Gasperi told a news conference the Bidault announcement was a thing "bigger than we are, bigger than Italy and France, bigger than the Italian elections."

The two will lunch together. Bidault will leave for Paris by train tonight. De Gasperi will make a political speech at Casale, near Crea.

Newspapers Strike

Italians were deprived of newspaper accounts today of Trieste and the Italian political campaign. More than 1,000 dailies throughout the country were shut down last night by a 24-hour printers' strike for higher pay. Upward of 100,000 men were called out by their Communist-led union.

De Gasperi and Bidault, it was believed, were planning to talk over the political situation in Italy and France, where Communists bid strongly for power.

Turin Saturday that the United States, Britain and France propose to give the Adriatic seaport of Trieste back to Italy.

A three-power announcement on Trieste was made later in Washington. The Western powers invited Russia and Italy to talk about changing the six-month-old Italian peace treaty, which made Trieste and environs a free territory. Italy and Communist Yugoslavia both want the port. The territory now is occupied by U. S., British and Yugoslav troops.

(The Moscow radio said last night "the United States, Britain and France are acting behind the back of the Soviet union in proposing to revise the peace treaty with Italy.")

News of the proposal led to first fights yesterday in Trieste and Milan. It brought approval from many Italians, criticism in Communist Eastern Europe and a doubtful response from some Triestinos. Borba, Belgrade Communist newspaper, gave a hint of the official Yugoslav attitude. It reported the news briefly under the headline, Imperialist maneuvers with Trieste before Italian elections.

They also set up a new classification for private passenger cars operated by person under 25 years of age. Rates for this new class will be within five percent of those for business use. The companies said more than one-fourth of Ohio's traffic accidents last year involved drivers in this age group.

Senate Seeking Facts On U.S. "Cold War" Aim

WASHINGTON, March 22—Senators called on the Truman administration today for secret data on the cold war with Communism.

Senator Bridges (R-NH) told a reporter the armed services committee hopes to find out from Secretary of State Marshall and Secretary of Defense Forrestal "if and where we intend to fight."

Both cabinet officers were summoned to a closed door meeting this afternoon. The session was called to consider President Truman's plea for temporary revival of the wartime draft and for immediate enactment of universal military training.

It was to be Marshall's, second appearance of the day on Capitol Hill. He was invited to sit in with senate foreign relations committee members during their final study of a bill to provide $570,000,000 in economic aid to China.

BOY HURT AS CAR, BICYCLE COLLIDE

Jerry Snowberger, 10, of 121 Hawkeye, suffered a cut right ankle and a bruised head when he was struck by a car driven by William A. Kent of 1543 E. Third st. at Lincoln and E. State st. Sunday afternoon.

The youth, riding a bicycle when hit, was knocked to the pavement, police said. He was treated at the Central Clinic.

Cars driven by Frederick J. Leiper of 1561 Maple st. and Lester R. Bowman of 1174 E. Third st. collided at 1 p. m. Saturday on S. Broadway.

Leiper had stopped for a traffic light and Bowman's truck collided with the rear of his car. The car bumper was damaged and the right front fender of the truck was caved in, police reported.

Loretta Young Is Surprise Winner Of Academy Award

HOLLYWOOD, March 22—Loretta Young pointed to the Oscar and cried excitedly to newsmen: "To be perfectly honest, I never expected this in my life. . . I thought Rosalind Russell was sitting in the 39th row at the Academy Awards—her fingers stuffed into her ears. Not saying a prayer," she explained afterward, "but feeling one."

When she saw Loretta head for the stage last night, she joined nearly 6,000 other spectators in roaring applause.

Miss Young's receipt of the foot-high gold statuette for the best performance by an actress in 1947 was the big upset of the 20th annual ceremonies of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. She won for her spirited portrayal of a Swedish-accented housemaid, who rose to congresswoman in "The Farmer's Daughter."

Rosalind, her good friend, was the favorite in advance speculation, and by four to one in a trade-paper poll—for her depiction of the tragic Lavinia in "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Otherwise, the awards went according to forecasts. "Gentleman's Agreement," a dramatic rap at anti-Semitism, was designated the best picture of last year.

Gray and suave Ronald Colman, 57, won his first Oscar in 25 years of stardom in more than 50 pictures as the mad scientist stage actor in "A Double Life."

Sticky Edmund Gwenn, 70, his cheeks and bald head lipsticked, cheered by the congratulatory backstage buses of Celeste Holm and other actresses, said his prize would go on his library table. There it would join the Look magazine and Hollywood Foreign Correspondents' Association trophies, presented earlier this year, for her performance as Kris Kringle in "Miracle on 34th Street." The Oscar is the first for Gwenn, like Colman a native of England.

Miss Hfilm was honored for her acting in "Gentleman's Agreement," a Brown-haired, blue-eyed Loretta, born Gretchen Young 35 years ago in Salt Lake City, accepted her award tearfully.

"The academy awards have been a spectator sport for me in the past," she said, "but tonight I dressed for the stage, just in case." To her Oscar, she exclaimed: "As for you—at long last!"

In addition to the best-picture and Celeste Holm awards for "Gentleman's Agreement," its director, Elin Kason, received an Oscar.

Production Chief Barry P. Zanuck of 20th-Century-Fox said in accepting the best-film trophy: "This makes up for a sharp disappointment I suffered some years ago. I'm sure I will be forgiven for mentioning the name of that picture—'Wilson'."

Another Fox entry this year, "Miracle on 34th Street," won three awards. Besides Gwenn's, one went to Valentine Davies for the best original motion picture story and another to George Seaton for the best written screen play.

"Zip-A-Dee-Do-Do!" was voted by the 1,253 academy members to be the best original song of the year. The Alie Wubel-Ray Gilbert composition was heard in Disney's "Song of the South."

A small party followed at the home of Edward Selzer, who produced the winning cartoon, "Twelve Men."

Ken Murray was given a special Oscar for producing "Bill and Ted," a picture that started lovebirds. "Imagine!" he exclaimed, "when so many people have given me the bird!"

Talking Point

Defeatists who've been saying that Russia has the inside track in power politics may have to make an exception of the three-power proposal for giving Trieste back to the Italians. The United States, Great Britain and France have hit on a good talking point in their campaign for Italian support in the election next month.

Trieste, formerly belonging to Austria, was bestowed on Italy in the territory-trading after World war I. At the end of World war II, it was set up as a free territory under the terms of the peace treaty with Italy and placed under United Nations jurisdiction. This, of course, was a blow to Italy. But it also turned out to be a blow to the Western Allies, because it had the effect of inviting the neighboring Yugoslavs, dominated by Marshal Tito's Russianized regime, to muscle in at will. The three powers suggesting return of Trieste to Italy point out that the arrangement hasn't been working well, which is an understatement of first magnitude.

Many Italians will be overjoyed at the prospect of getting back what they think belongs to them, even though the promise of the United States, Great Britain and France, like so many political promises, is obviously for the purpose of obtaining votes and may or may not be kept, or even be keepable, when the Italian election is over.

Palestine Dilemma

The dilemma of what to do about Palestine hasn't been helped any by the newest United States move—a proposal to abandon the United Nations partition plan in favor of a temporary trusteeship, pending reconciliation between Jews and Arabs.

It means the United States favors shifting from one horn of the dilemma to the other horn—with the dilemma unchanged. The dilemma, of course, is the irreconcilable attitude of Jews and Arabs. Their differences can't be patched up any easier with a trusteeship than by the partition plan approved by the United Nations assembly last November.

The proposal by the United States does not state, incidentally, what nation would be responsible for the temporary trusteeship—whether Great Britain would be expected to stay on the scene, or whether it would withdraw in the middle of May, as planned, passing the hot potato of Holy land strife to the United Nations. The only other government that conceivably could or would take it, under the circumstances, is the United States.

When the United Nations assembly approved the partition plan, only a month was required by members of the new Palestine commission to realize that nothing could be done without military force. It reported this to the United Nations Security Council, which still hasn't decided what can be done about it.

It Would Help

The realistic Dutch, coming to grips with the Moscow-bossed campaign to saddle Europeans with the curse of dictatorship, have hit on one especially good idea. It would help others too.

The Dutch idea is to unmask the conspiracy of Communism and call it by its right name. Communism, Dutch speakers and magazines are saying is as misleading a label as national socialism was in Hitler's time. It isn't Communism the Kremlin has for sale but a police state that should be called Stalinism, in recognition of the Russian dictator's part in perfecting its techniques of terror. In this connection it's recalled that Stalin never referred to Germans during the war or since as national socialists or Nazis but always as "Hitlerites." He recognized what the Dutch recognize now—that dictatorship tries to make itself seem to be something else to make it palatable for the glib, with their infinite capacity for believing what isn't so. In the Netherlands, the ideology of Communism has a certain attraction that would be wiped out if the so-called Communist party were called what it really is—a conspiracy to foist a police state on unwilling victims.

Libeling Mississippi

Mississippi's latest legislative proposal is funnier and less sinister than the one which empowered its governor to deputize plainclothes policemen known only to himself. The new proposal would make any radio commentator legally liable for any remarks deemed insulting to the state. This would have puzzled Edmund Burke, who said he knew of no way to draw up an indictment against a whole people; he would have been equally doubtful about the possibility of libeling a state.

Mississippians, and all others in whom regional pride burns with a hard, red-hot flame, should be less thin-skinned. If the radio carries unfavorable remarks about Mississippi, that state's citizens should study them and decide whether they are true. If they are, Mississippi should take steps to eliminate the cause of criticism. If they aren't true, the real facts will be known soon enough.

Privileges and Obligations

Lee Donald Stern of Cleveland, a conscientious objector, has asked the government to cancel the action restraining his political and civil rights. He has decided he can't live up to the obligations of citizenship and plans to settle in Paraguay.

The obligations of American citizenship are few, much less exacting than in most nations. The American citizen should vote, he must pay taxes and he is subject to wartime orders. In return he receives privileges given in free other nations. He is free to travel where he wishes, work at what ever trade he chooses, worship as he pleases and so and write what he pleases within the limits of local laws.

Outside these limits to find in Paraguay the privileges of citizenship without their obligations. He may be disappointed the next time Paraguay asks into a nation with Bolivia.

The Stars Say

BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE
For Tuesday, March 23

While issues of major importance are in the balance it might be well to carry over decisive efforts or critical decisions, since the judgment is under rather confused and uncertain sidereal aspects.

A revamping of schedules, plans or objectives might be advisable, with reconsideration of the ideas and wishes of others, concerned with writings, contracts, publicity, litigation, change and travel. There is much to be gained by compromise or amicable yielding in dubious places. Refrain from tension, restlessness. Postpone all decisions until the danger point has vanished and reason reigns.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may run into a year in which important decisions must be made, and with perspicacity and sound judgment. Yet a tendency to act under strain, nervous tension and jumble ideas might prove vital to pending matters of major importance. Large operations or plans, connected with change of scope and in relation to new contracts, writings, publicity, litigation and financial standing demand wise and seasoned judgment and astute action.

Much is to be gained by reflection, rationalizing, compromise and sound business plans and clever thinking. Avoid haste, cloudy, or involved ideas.

A child born on this day may be active, energetic and creative but an inclination to nervous agitation and high-tension decisions may complicate its affairs.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

BY WALTER KIERNAN

Television made immense strides over the weekend but there are complaints from tavern patrons that Toscanini can't wrestle.

In fact when Arturo stepped forward on the screen in one hat, a customer took in the white tie and tails and called "over here with the clock Mac, and make it snappy!"

When Petrillo lifted the ban on music on television it was the biggest entertainment news since the bulletin "Garbo Talks!" flashed from coast-to-coast.

I won't say it means the end of radio but I heard that several commentators have sent for the Radio Broadcast company's salesman's manual.

Petrillo's ruling resolves some of the doubts of the presidential campaign — a candidate will be permitted to play piano in television.

And better still — we'll be permitted to listen.

A man pushed for window looking said he was looking for his car. There was a lot of noise outside around these days.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Terrified Youngster Needs Care

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

Few things are more alarming to parents than to watch a child through what is called an attack of night terrors. The child starts up in bed, cries out in fear, and gives every evidence of being completely terrified. To those looking on he seems to be wide awake but actually he is not conscious of his ordinary surroundings and in the morning has no recollection of what has occurred.

The underlying cause of night terrors is almost always to be found in some unhappiness or insecurity in the child's life, though there are a number of more definite things which may help bring on the attacks. These include infections in the tonsils and adenoids, digestive upsets, and constipation.

Sugar Solution

It has been noted in some cases that there is a lessening of the sugar in the blood, and in these instances treatment by the giving of a glucose or sugar solution at night has been found helpful.

The attacks usually occur in children between five and eight years of age and come on once or twice a week. They develop during the period of deepest sleep from around a half hour to two and a half hours after the youngster goes to sleep. It is rare for more than one attack to occur a night.

Different from Nightmares

It is necessary to tell the night terror attacks from nightmares. In nightmares, the child is asleep and dreaming, but the child suffering from night terrors appears to be awake and is actually in a state of semi-consciousness, in which his phantasies take the place of reality. The nightmare, as a rule, occurs during a period of light sleep and afterwards the child usually wakes up.

Epileptic attacks may also occur at night, and the symptoms of such attacks may somewhat resemble those which occur in night terrors. However, in an attack of epilepsy there are convulsions, and the child usually falls into a deep sleep after an attack. Furthermore, in night terrors the child usually wakes up.

Columbiana Factory Expands

COLUMBIANA, March 22—Work was begun today on the second expansion project at the Columbiana Pump Co.'s plant, which will more than double the size of the original foundry, to which a substantial addition was made two years ago.

C. C. Kaiser & Son, Youngstown engineering and contracting firm, which has the contract, moved in its equipment Saturday.

The present building enterprise involves two additions to the foundry, one on the north side extending out nearly to Railroad street, and one on the east side, making an L-shaped brick building of the most modern foundry design and adding about 8500 square feet of floor area.

Space for the cleaning department, now occupying a frame structure connected with the north side of the present foundry, and for the core department, will be provided by the addition to the east side, which will be about 40 x 80 feet. With completion of this addition, the cleaning department will be moved to its new location, and the frame structure will be razed, its site to be embraced in the ground area of the north addition. This addition will be about 70 x 70 feet, and will incorporate the present brick pattern storage building. Construction is expected to take all summer.

The enlarged foundry will have every modern facility for the comfort and convenience of employees, including locker room and shower room, and office for the foreman. The company expects to make a considerable increase in its foundry force. The plant is served by the switch connecting the Pennsylvania and Y. & S. railroads.

The new owners, headed by Clyde Hoover of the Enterprise Co. here, acquired the plant about three years ago from the heirs of the late J. V. Stewart. Mr. Hoover is its president.

Emerson J. Davis of Youngstown vice president, and Mark Klingensmith of the Union Banking Co., Columbiana, secretary and treasurer.

M. A. Curry of East Liverpool, director of child welfare in Columbiana county, will speak at the meeting of the Kiwanis club this evening.

Rev. L. J. Quade of Jewett, Methodist minister, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Rotary club this evening. Rev. A. R. Brown is program chairman.

Shirley Wells, social chairman, had charge of the program, which included a vocal solo by Rachel Esterly, accompanied by Marilyn Nolan, and two piano sonatas by Miss Wells. The next meeting will be April 16.

Robert Wentz, Scout commissioner, discussed "Achievements" when he was guest speaker at a Pack 6 night program given by Cub pack 6 of St. Paul's Catholic church Friday evening in the parochial school.

Rev. Fr. William Appell, who opened the program with prayer, also gave a talk.

John F. Dupal, cubmaster, welcomed visitors men and prospective cubs.

"Cub Scout Handymen" was the theme for March.

A shadow show by the cubs was featured and Johnny Dupal won a nail driving contest.

Edwin Deagan conducted a stunt and Robert DeCrow received a special prize.

In the advancement awards, James Fitzgerald received the wolf badge, while the bear badge, gold and silver arrow points and denner stripes were awarded James Fetters, Jr., and Joseph Hajcak.

A kite contest was planned for April. It will be in charge of a committee composed of Frank Corso, Bernard DeCrow and James Fetters.

The program closed with the "living circle" ceremony by the cubs and prayer by Cubmaster Dupal.

The April theme is "Legends and traditions."

AS LONG AS I LIVE

by Ione Sandberg Shriber

It was beyond belief. She stood there by the dresser, rigidly, her slim body tense and taut, and looked at the things she held in her hands.

She didn't believe it. They weren't there. She wasn't seeing them.

She closed her eyes strickenly but when she opened them nothing had changed. The—the things—were still in Rush's leather case.

RUSH!

She put out a tentative finger and touched the knife, the lock. The lock from the grandfather clock. It was twisted now and bent and everyone might not know it for what it was but Ann had opened the clock for too many years not to recognize it immediately. The key was in the lock—or had been—but it had snapped off in the crash so that only an uneven jagged piece of metal stuck out from the bent keyhole.

But the clock had been locked. The key had been turned. It was still turned. And the lock was so bent, so twisted, that it could not have been done after the clock had fallen. That, undoubtedly explained why it was here, concealed from prying eyes, curious eyes that might belong to Sam Blanding . . . or to Ann Forrester.

She closed the case and replaced it in the drawer. She closed the drawer and walked away from it. She walked stiffly into the bathroom and was at once violently sick to her stomach. And before she had managed to regain control of herself, Rush was back.

She looked up to see him regarding her from the doorway.

He said quietly, "What's the matter, Ann?"

She motioned feebly for him to go away but he refused. He stood where he was, making no motion toward her, but staying there.

"I lost my lunch," she mumbled, hating the sour taste in her mouth. "The—I guess the relief was too much for me." It was a lame excuse but it was the best she could manage.

"You've done too much today," he came over, held her close, looked into the mirror at her pale face that was damp now with sweat. If he felt the sudden tightening of her body at his nearness he ignored it and went on talking.

"These days at the lake will be good for you. Iron out all the kinks. It's all right with Enos and Laurie. They're coming down in a few minutes. Think it's safe to leave them here? Laurie and your old beau?" Enos strangely, still remained at the Phillip.

"Oh, Rush!"

"I was only kidding. I told them we were about ready to go."

"She clung to the porcelain wash-bowl. In the mirror her eyes met his."

"Rush, I'm not sure—do you think—"

"Sure. You'll be fine. You lie down while I close the suitcase. Get everything in it."

She nodded mutely, her breath coming fast. How was she going to get out of this? How could she?

He led her to the bed, propped her on pillows, went about closing the suitcase with a cheerful whistle. The same notes over and over until she thought she couldn't bear the endless repetition. And then he realized, dully, that Rush was whistling. "After You've Gone."

Somehow she knew arguing would avail her nothing. In an intuitive flash she saw that if she were to save herself she had to go with him. Docilely. Like a lamb, she thought bitterly, led to slaughter.

I can't do it, she thought. I'm too frightened. There isn't any stuff in my knees to make me stand up. I'll fall down if I even try and then, astonishingly, she was walking across the room with Rush and out into the hall and down the steps.

He held her arm close to his, as though he wanted to help her and support her or—as though she might try to get away from him.

This is it, she thought frantically, this is it and what am I doing? Just going along without opening my mouth?

But if she should start screaming, hurling accusations again, not right and left this time, but squarely into Rush's handsome face, what would happen? They wouldn't believe her now, any more than they had before. They'd have plausible explanations for those things being in Rush's case they'd get those same regretful looks on their faces, and the first thing she knew she'd be on her way to a mental hospital.

No, it was better to go along, without protest, without argument, as though she were happy and pleased about the whole thing. If she could keep Rush believing that, if she could allay any suspicion of her, then she might have a chance. When they stopped for groceries, or for gasoline—they might even have a flat tire—she had to reach Sam Blanding—he was her only hope.

Before she knew it they were on the front porch and everyone was being merry and Enos said shouldn't they have rice to throw and the car was ready in the driveway.

Then they were in the car and Rush was stepping on the starter and the car began to roll down the driveway and such a tremendous wave of panic broke over Ann that she thought she couldn't stand it.

"Good going, darling," Rush said, turning his head to smile at her. "I wasn't sure you'd make it. You're a good girl, Ann."

She made herself turn and smile at him. She hoped it looked like other smiles she'd given him in the past. It felt like a grimace stretching her face.

Selznick Wishes He Never Thought of "Dream House"

By Virginia MacPherson
HOLLYWOOD, March 22 — Producer David Selznick, who knows nothing about a T-square, plunged into the "dream house" business to publicize his latest epic and wound up with a king-sized nightmare that'll keep him from dreaming for a long time.

Selznick thought it would be nice to make dream houses available to all. He would have blue-prints drawn and get carpenters and interior decorators in 100 major cities to work on duplicates.

It had all kinds of possibilities. Builders on a budget could save architect's fees, and the RKO picture, "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House," would get a million bucks worth of free publicity.

But the thing started to backfire when RKO hired five architects and two draftsmen to draw up this dream cottage.

What happened next was enough to keep Contractor Selznick awake nights. All seven experts came from seven different sections of the U. S. All seven had seven different ideas about what a dream house should look like.

Albert D'Agostino, supervising art director at RKO, is a New Yorker. He held out for early American. Architects Carroll Clark and Ralph Berger are Californians. They had colonial and modern in mind.

Field Gray, a Texan, insisted on open patios and outdoor dining rooms. John Kibbey, draftsman from Massachusetts with sea spray in his eyes, was all for a New England style cottage.

Charles Pyke wanted something fancier in architectural niceties. He's from Pennsylvania. And Eugene Evans, a Colorado son, couldn't see anything but rural ranches.

No Help

Selznick, who makes movies and millions with no apparent strain, wasn't much help, either. All he required, he said, was a house that could be put up in every corner of the nation.

It had to be cool enough for Dixie. And snug enough for Eastern blizzards. And hooked together to hold up in a California earthquake or a Florida twister.

Last we hear, everybody was working on a corner of Selznick's dream house. In seven different styles. The shape'll be New England, with Southern colonial doors and windows. The breakfast room and kitchen are modern.

Texas comes into its own in the terrace and living room, and Pennsylvania's in there with built-in brick-a-brac hooks, shelves, and cabinets.

Furniture? It'll be early American. The wall paper's Cape Cod and Colonial, with a California flavor to the flowered chintz drapes.

The man from Colorado was still unhappy. So they stuck a fence

Ohio's highway building, including local, state and federal contracts, showed an increase for the year 1947 in comparison with 1946.

According to figures released here, $37,200,000 value in construction of Ohio highways in 1947 jumped to $41,300,000 value in 1947. Throughout the United States, the agency said, there was an increase of 63 per cent in 1947 expenditures over that of the year before.

Contracts awarded in Ohio were $35,200,000 in 1946 in comparison to $45,000,000 in the year following.

However, the Public Roads Administration, which is a division of the FWA, warns that the level of highway construction in the U. S. still is far below the rate necessary to make any noticeable dent in the increasing volume of needs for better roads.

Low Income Families Get Housing Facilities

COLUMBUS, March 22—Higher income families, approximately 273 of them, are being weeded out of Columbus metropolitan housing projects at the rate of 15 a month.

Manager Russell Taylor said the average income of the group being evicted is $3,017. Limitations for occupants of the public housing range from $2,040 for childless couples to $2,720 for families with three or more children.

One of the vacancies, authorities said, will go to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reiser and their eight children. The family has been furnished lodging by the Salvation Army for the past eight months.

Timely Hints On Repairs To Home

A Damp or Wet Cellar
Sweating cellar walls often are mistaken for leaking walls. This dampness from condensation can be combatted by keeping cellar windows closed on damp days and open for thorough ventilation on dry days.
Lining a cellar often is necessary. It should be coated with asphalt, tar or other materials to keep the lining from rotting, and wash and plaster or wall board can be applied to furring strips.
Major cracks or crumbling of part of the foundation after the house is shored up. Minor cracks often can be stopped from the inside. There are coatings containing a metallic ingredient for this purpose.
Membrane waterproofing on the outside when a house is built is best security.

Cleaning Gutters and Leaders
Accumulated leaves and birds' nests are among the most common causes of overflowing gutters and clogged down spouts, or leaders. Wire basket-like strainers should cap the top opening of leaders. They usually are obtainable in hardware stores. Clogged leaders will burst in freezing weather. Corrugated sheet metal is used to allow for such expansion.
It is wise to clean out all gutters, or eaves troughs, every autumn after the leaves have fallen. When clean of rubbish they should be flushed with a hose to remove traces of acid. Rotting leaves and wet clinders caused corrosion. The troughs also should be kept free of heavy snow and ice. Metal paint prolongs the life of gutters and leaders.
If wooden box type gutters are used they should be lined with rust-proof metal, swabbed with fibrous asphalt, or both.

Stopping a Dripping Faucet
The compression type faucet, used in most homes, contains a composition disc or washer that leaks when it wears out. This type faucet is recognizable by the stem of its spindle moving slightly up and down as it is turned. After shutting off the water below the fixture or in the main line, wrap a cloth on a wrench to protect the finish and unscrew the top nut or cap below the handle. This allows the spindle to be unscrewed and taken out. Remove the brass screw at the bottom of the spindle and replace the washer.

VETS SPEARHEAD HOUSING FIGHT

URGING PASSAGE OF THE Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing Bill, delegates to the National Veterans Housing Conference in Washington met Sen. Robert Taft, co-sponsor of the bill. Shown (l. to r.) are: Dr. A. H. Sirak, Ohio; Sen. Taft; Arthur L. Coleman, Minn.; Robert A. Browning, Mass.; Rep. Hale Boggs, La., and Sen. Allen J. Ellender, La. Over 1,500 vets, from 51 national organizations, attended the conference. (International)

If the leak is around the stem try tightening the cap nut. Continued leaking here calls for new packing washers under the cap nut. A thumping or hum when a faucet is partly turned on is a sign of a loose or worn disc washer, a worn spindle, or a loose cap nut.

Relieving a Sticking Door
Faulty hinges may cause a door to bind. This is easily remedied. But if the trouble is caused by settlement of the frame or warping of the door, skilled carpentry may be needed.
Notice if the margin around the door is lopsided and if looseness in the hinges is apparent when the door is open and lifted by the knob. Tightening the screws or placing wooden pegs in the holes for longer screws may stop that. If the hinges are not plumb try cardboard shims under their leaves to raise or lower them.

Care should be taken in planing a door not to take off too much. The wood may shrink in dry weather. Paint all surfaces, otherwise damp weather will cause swelling. A third hinge between the usual two often helps to straighten a warped door.
If a door frame has spread from settlement enough to leave the door too narrow it may be necessary to remove the strike plate of the latch, fasten a strip the entire height of the door frame and cut a new latch hole. Further skill is required to place this strip along the hinge edge of the frame.
A rattling door may be cured by moving the strike plate back toward the stop.

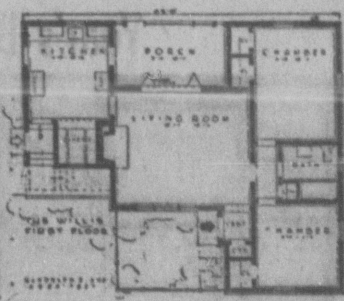

Freeing Stuck Windows
For windows that lift freely in dry weather but stick on damp days, rub paraffin or beeswax in the grooves and work it down by moving the sash. If this is insufficient remove the moldings, or beads, and coat all friction surfaces with linseed oil. It may be that the stop beads fit too snugly. Moving them is easy if they are nailed, but light planing may be better if they are held by screws.
Do not fit the stop beads too closely, or the window will not be weathertight. If the window sash swells so that its sides bind against the pulley stile, the sash should be removed, lightly planed and coated with linseed oil, then waxed.

Removal of the sash is necessary in replacing sash cords. Unscrew the pocket cover in the side of the frame and cut the new cord or chain a little longer than needed. Length can be adjusted at the window end. For correct length the sash weight will clear the bottom of the box when the lower sash is raised and will not hit the pulley when the window is down. Chains are better than cords when replacement is needed.

Repairing a Leaky Roof
When a roof leaks prompt action is required to avoid more extensive damage. It may be a risky job, so don't attempt to walk on a steep roof without support of a strong rope. Still better, fasten firm hooks on the end of a ladder and hook it over the ridge.
If the attic is unfinished even the smallest holes can be seen from the inside on a bright day and wires or straw can be pushed through them to mark the leaks on the outside. Turn the hose on the roof and watch for drips from invisible leaks.
A new shingle or a piece of well painted tin can be slipped under the leaky shingle as a temporary measure. Various roofing compounds of fibrous bituminous material are made for sealing holes. The manufacturers usually supply complete instructions.
Without experience, it may be best for the amateur to avoid slate roofs. Additional damage may be caused.
